Walter Churchill was born in Salem Oregon on April 10, 1891. He would be hired by Portland Fire on May 24, 1916. He was assigned to Engine 17. He would enlist in WWI on December 4, 1917. He returned January 11, 1919 and was assigned to Engine 21. He would go on to serve on Engine 16 and Engine 2 before retiring on a disability pension on August 7, 1937. He would die from a heart attack on August 1, 1939.

Walter was a member of the World War I "Spruce Production Division." This unique unit of the Army was assembled to log and process Sitka Spruce lumber, a necessary wood for aircraft of the day. Extremely hard, yet flexible, spruce had been used by the European air forces and became key for the US during the war. Labor strife had made acquisition of the wood difficult so the military formed the Spruce Production Division in May 1917. They would begin by patrolling forests to discourage sabotage by disgruntled unions. It would evolve into a full logging operation to ensure quality spruce lumber for aircraft and douglas fir lumber for ships. Over 7,500 soldiers would be assigned to the unit's operations in the Pacific Northwest. They would produce a total of 53,718,591 board feet of aircraft grade lumber. The unit was disbanded at the end of the war, on November 11, 1918.

Walter is buried in North 45.

He was at a polling place called "The Cascades" in Skamania County, Washington. The vote was being summed up after the polls had closed. A row occurred in an adjacent room and Sheriff Edmond Sullivan was asked to quell it. He successfully arrested one man and placed him in custody, then attempted to take the others. He was fired upon at the door. He came in contact with a man named Edward Bush and a scuffle ensued. Sullivan was brutally assaulted and murdered. John endeavored to help the Sheriff and was shot, with the ball entering the back and passing through the body into the pit of his stomach. He received medical attention and the ball was extracted, but he would not survive.

He was assigned to Engine 7 and Engine 32 but resigned on December 4, 1920. He was re-hired on July 25, 1923 and assigned to Engine 6. He would end his career with a line of duty death while working at Engine 28.

The incident which claimed Gardner's life is described here. On January 19, 1935, while responding to a house fire at 2305 NE 51st Avenue, Gardner was overcome by smoke while advancing a hose line. The fire, which was caused by an overheated stove, caused $850 in damage to the home. Gardner was 63 years old at the time of his death. Gardner left behind a wife Lillian, two sons, and one daughter. He is buried in the Firefighter's Section in grave North 109.

ROBERT GEE SOUTH 32

Died March 13, 1923

Robert Gee was born in March of 1862 in Iowa. He and his wife, Annie DeBoest (daughter of Tinny DeBoest, who served as Chief of the East Portland Fire Department), would have four children and at the time of his death on March 13, 1923, would live at 13 East Seventh Street in Portland, Oregon.

Robert's personnel record is not clear on his date of hire, showing both September 24, 1896 and August 7, 1903. It may be that he was an "extraman" for the first 7 years of his career before being hired for pay in 1903. The 1905 yearbook shows him assigned to Truck 4 in 1905. His personnel record shows him spending the balance of his career at Engine 12. Engine 12 was located at 203 NE 28th Avenue at that time and would have been served by horses. Engine 12 was not established until 1907, but personnel records typically did not exist prior to about 1903 and were often made out later in a member's career and back-dated to show a member's work assignments. The discrepancy in his record is not unusual for the day.

Robert would retire and begin receiving his pension on September 18, 1917. He would pass away on March 13, 1923 of "chronic diabetes," as identified by his death certificate. Robert is buried in the Firefighter's Section in grave South 32.

The incident in which he would meet his demise is described here. On March 16, 1916, he was atop a telegraph pole at NW 26th and Nicolai Streets doing maintenance on the lines when he came in contact with a 10,000 volt electrical line. His body immediately went limp and he was left suspended from the pole by his safety belt. Other Linemen lowered him to the ground and began resuscitation efforts. They continued their lifesaving efforts on the scene for over 4 hours before transporting him to Good Samaritan Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. He is buried in the Firefighter's Section in Grave North 100.

Clifford Gustafson, his son, would die three years later. He is buried next to Emil in Grave North 101. Seven years after Clifford's death, Clara, his wife, would die and also be buried next to him in grave North 20. It is unknown what became of their other two children.

Ted is survived by his wife, Ina, son, Dave Kingery, stepdaughter Lisa Collins, her husband Patrick Collins, grand children Michael and Kent Collins, Jason and Andrew Jacoby, and great-grandchildren Justice, Dominic, and Kylie Jacoby. Ted's daughter, Alli (husband Rick Jacoby) predeceased him.

Ted passed away at home on March 10, 2021 at the age of 97. He had been going strong until 9 months before when he fractured his back from a fall. Ted was born and raised in Portland, OR. and never stopped watching Oregon Football. He graduated from Roosevelt High.

Ted joined the Army, serving from 1943 – 1946 during WW2. He was a proud member of the 82nd Airborne. Ted's battles and campaigns included:

- jumping behind enemy lines on D-Day at Normandy,
- Battle of the Bulge, Rhineland, Central Europe.
- He took part in liberating a concentration camp
- carried the 82nd Airborne colors into Berlin.

After the Army, Ted became a Portland Firefighter, serving from 1947 to 1977– retiring after 30 years. Almost all of Ted's service was at Station 1, or what Portland Firefighter's refer to as "The Big House." Ted Loved being a Portland Firefighter. In fact, Ted requested burial in the Firefighter's Section so that he could be with his friends.

Ted passed on his love of firefighting to his grandson Kent. Ted was so proud to wear his Portland Firefighter's uniform to Kent's pinning ceremony as Kent became a firefighter. Ted wanted to be buried in that same uniform. Three generations of Firefighters in one family is truly special.

After retirement, Ted began playing even more golf as he owned a home bordering Broadmoor Country Club in North Portland. He became a snowbird, eventually buying a home on the golf course in Palm Desert, CA with his wife Ina. Ted made many good friends along the way. Ted took pride in spending time with family and friends.

Ted met and married Ina later in life. But that didn't stop them from behaving like teens. They loved to laugh, pull jokes on each other, entertain, party, golf, travel, play cards and enjoy friends and family.

Ted was a kind and caring man, who always had jokes and stories to share. He always made time to talk to and to help others. Ted was fun-loving, always happy, and never complained. You always felt amazed after spending time with Ted. He was a wonderful husband, father, and grandfather.

Died September 25, 2016

After graduating from high school in Newton, Massachusetts, Dick enlisted in the United States Army where he served 18 months in the combat zone in Korea between 1951 and 1953.

In 1955, Dick joined his older brother as a volunteer firefighter in the Needham, Massachusetts Fire Department. He served for just under 30 years, the last 10 years as the Superintendent of Fire Communications.

Following heart surgery, he retired on a disability. He had a chance to work in Tokyo, Japan teaching English and followed that dream. He stayed in Japan for 9 years, at which time he met his loving wife Etsuko. They were married December 25, 1991.

In 1994, Dick retired again. He and Etsuko embarked on a tour of the United States and chose to settle in the Portland area. They initially settled in Gresham, then moved into Portland.

Dick's fire service roots would get the best of him and he began following the activities of Portland Fire & Rescue. In 2004, he began volunteering with the development of the Fire Museum at the Historic Belmont Firehouse. Dick also enjoyed photography and began taking pictures of Portland Fire & Rescue incidents. In 2006, the Fire Bureau found his contributions and efforts valuable and appointed Dick "Volunteer Photographer" for Portland Fire & Rescue, a role in which he proudly served until his health would no longer allow him to continue. Dick's photographs were not only amazing "snapshots" of firefighters in action, but his images provided greater insight into the origins, spread, and ultimate damage caused by the fires he captured. His images of other types of fire bureau actions also helped Portland Fire & Rescue see themselves through the public eye in a productive and helpful way.

Dick passed away in his home on September 25, 2016. He was particularly fond of Station 7 (his reason for choosing grave South 7). He has the distinction of being the first volunteer to be buried in the Firefighter's Section since the department became a paid agency in 1883. He rests in grave South 7.

The incident in which he would die is described here. Hewston was at the scene of a fire on October 3, 1892 in the Kamm Block when knocked from his ladder by a falling timber. He died of a fractured skull. He is buried in the Firefighter's Section in grave North 62.

FRED MARTIN ISBELL

SOUTH 83

Died February 18, 2021

The story of how Krimbel met his demise is described here. On August 16, 1930, Truck 2 was dispatched to the Councilor Apartments. Henry Krimbel was working at Truck 2 at SW 4th and Montgomery. A cigarette burning on the couch started the fire. Truck 2's crew was sent to the roof to help ventilate the fire. They cut holes to release the heat and smoke. They also found a skylight and decided to open it up. The smoke had become very thick. Krimbel and his crew started working around the edges of the skylight to pry it off. Firefighters were blinded by the smoke. Krimbel became dizzy from the heat and the smoke, dropping to his knees to keep his balance. With Krimbel balancing himself on the skylight, it was unknowingly pulled to the side by other firefighters. He lost his balance and fell into the hole, about 10 feet to the floor below. Krimbel was off work for a couple months before returning to work at Engine 25. He was able to work, but I was never quite the same. For the next couple years, Krimbel's kidneys gave him problems. The doctor said they were damaged in the fall. By October of 1932, the pain had become too much for Krimbel to work. On October 23, 1932, the injuries from the fall would finally take his life. Krimbel was hired by the Portland Fire Department in 1920. Krimbel would not be added to the Campbell Memorial until June of 2008. His family had attempted to have him added since his son, Albert, became an adult (he was age 5 at the time of Krimbel's death). His granddaughter, Stephanie Rogers, was finally successful. Krimbel's Great Granddaughters rang the bell at the 2008 Campbell Memorial Service, the year Henry Krimbel was finally recognized.

After Henry Krimbel died, his widow, Stephanie, worked as a machine operator for Jantzen Knitting Mills until the company pressed her to retire at age 70. She lived to be 100.

Albert Krimbel dutifully took his two daughters to visit his father's gravesite at Lone Fir Cemetery every Memorial Day. "We'd bring clippers and brooms to clean up the site," Stephanie Rogers recalled. "For me, that's where I knew Grandpa Henry."

Rogers, 44, lives with her husband and three children in her grandfather's Southeast Portland home. She remembers riding her tricycle around the basement, wearing her grandfather's fire helmet.

Albert Krimbel, who lives in a nursing home because of failing health after multiple strokes, will be unable to attend today's event. But Stephanie and her family promise to share their photos of the ceremony with him, the last in the Krimbel line.

"I really needed to do this for my father," she said.

Born July 16, 1880, Frank McCormick was hired by the Portland Fire Department on August 3, 1910. He was assigned to Truck 1. He is listed as a line of duty death on line of duty death memorials.

The incident in which he met his demise is described below. On the evening of August 14, 1919, about 7:00 in the evening, the night watchman at the Northwest Box Factory, at the foot of SW Lincoln Street, noticed a fire underneath the building. He turned in the fire at the nearest alarm box. The fire grew quickly. Fire Marshal Grenfell was one of the first chief's to respond. He stopped along the way to turn in a third alarm at an alarm box. Truck 1 arrived and McCormick and his crew were assigned a position on a railroad trestle on the side of the building. The creosote soaked timbers of the trestle caught fire and the trestle was starting to fail so the crews retreated. McCormick got hit from the side by the hose being pulled back and it knocked him and several others off the trestle. George Asher of Truck 2 went first while McCormick and Abraham Blond fell right after him. It was about 30 feet to the ground. Asher and Blond broke some bones but McCormick hit his head. The crews tried to revive him but eventually transported him to Good Samaritan Hospital via the chief's car. McCormick died early in the morning on August 15th. Died May 14, 2025

Larry Alan Muir, a loving husband, father, grandfather, firefighter, tinkerer, builder, and amateur radio operator, passed away peacefully on May 14, 2025. His gregarious spirit, unwavering Christian faith, and commitment to family leave behind a legacy that will continue to inspire all who knew him.

Born to Richard and Evelyn Muir on July 23, 1952, Larry grew up alongside his siblings Marilyn, Steve, Randy, and Mindy in Portland, Oregon. His curious nature and thirst for knowledge led him to Portland State University, where he pursued his passion for history and Middle East studies. He continued his education, studying Biblical theology at the Ecola Bible College.

Larry's life changed forever when he met Jan Torgerson in Cannon Beach, Oregon—a special place that would become a touchstone throughout their lives together. They married on July 28, 1978, beginning a loving marriage that would span nearly five decades and result in eight children - Jeremy, Dan, Katie, Laura, Jessie, Amy, Jenny, and David - and thirteen grandchildren.

Following in his father's and brother's footsteps, Larry embarked on a career as a City of Portland Firefighter. Larry was hired on December 21, 1979. He worked at various stations, spending much of his time with the technical rescue program at Station 1 before transitioning into the Fire Marshal's office where he served as a Fire Inspector. His detail-oriented nature and commitment to service made him a very good inspector that worked well with the public as well as supporting the goals of fire safety. He retired on July 1, 2008.

Beyond his professional accomplishments, Larry was a true renaissance man. He built his family home with his own hands, embodying his do-it-yourself spirit. As an inventor, he was constantly tinkering and imagining ways to improve the world around him. As a cancer survivor, he faced life's challenges with remarkable courage and determination. Friends and family will remember his gift for storytelling, his humor, and his generous heart.

Above all, Larry was a devoted family man who loved his wife deeply and took immense pride in his children and grandchildren. His Christian faith and relationship with Christ guided his actions and inspired those around him. Larry's greatest wish was to leave a legacy of children who would thrive both in life and look to Christ for their guidance as well.

CHARLES F. REYNOLDS

NORTH 70

Died May 1, 1942

Charles F. Reynolds was born August 7, 1863 in Walla Walla, Washington. His Father, John B. Reynolds, was a Portland Volunteer Firefighter with Willamette Engine Company #1 in approximately 1870. It appears his brother, Charles F. Reynolds, also served as a Portland Volunteer as part of Columbian Engine Company #3 in 1860 and Willamette Engine Company #1 in 1864. He was shown serving as 2nd Assistant for Willamette in 1869.

John B. Reynolds would have four children. Charles Franklin Reynolds would be born in 1863, Amy May Reynolds in 1866, Thurston Marion Reynolds in 1872, and John Bertram Reynolds in 1873. Charles F. would appear to be named after his uncle, who had served alongside John B. Sr. on the fire department. While Charles F. was born in Oregon, his death certificate states he came to Oregon 54 years before his death, which would be approximately 1888 (he was age 78 at the time of death). Had he become a firefighter around that time, he could have served 15 years on the Portland Paid Fire Department and left prior to personnel records being kept, or kept accurate. This might explain why he has no personnel record in the Fire Department archives. Evidence of affiliation with the Portland Fire Department would be his burial in the Firefighter's Section of Lone Fir Cemetery, which is reserved for Portland Firefighters. His death certificate lists his occupation as "painter." He may have worked in the Logistics section of the Fire Department performing station maintenance.

There may be an exception to this. Charles F. was living in the Multnomah County Poor Farm, in Troutdale, Oregon at the time of his death. He had only one surviving sibling at that time (John B. Jr.) and had apparently never had children. It is possible that he was forgotten by family, not acknowledged, or just had no resources for a proper burial and was simply placed in a grave near his closest family member, his father. On five other occasions, family members of firefighters were buried in the Firefighter's Section. A temporary gravemarker was placed at Charles F.'s grave and it was never replaced with a proper and permanent gravemarker, something usually left for family to do. Charles is buried in grave North 70.

Died May 20, 1928

Charles Ryan was born in 1899 in Sheboygan, Michigan. He moved to Portland in 1909 and attended Shattuck School and Lincoln High School. He enlisted in the war. After being honorably discharged. He was hired by the fire department on July 21, 1924 and assigned to Truck 3. He would lose his life in a training incident, leaving his wife Clara H. Ryan and their daughter Alice (age 3 1/2 at the time). His parents were Charles and Mary Ryan and sister Oka.

The incident in which he would meet his demise is described here. On May 20, 1928, a group of firefighters were practicing a ladder drill team maneuver at the corner of Chapman and Taylor Streets for the upcoming Rose Festival celebration when tragedy suddenly struck. Two firefighters, William McCreery and Charles Ryan, were at the top of a straight ladder, approximately 45 feet above the street. They were tied together by a leather lifebelt. The belt broke, sending both Ryan and McCreery to the street. Ryan died instantly while McCreery would succumb 12 hours later. Ryan is buried in the Firefighter's Section in grave South 146.

Died Febuary 28, 1890

Little is known about Fred Wagner since he died before personnel records were kept or retained. He was born around 1851. His death was deemed a line of duty death and he is represented on memorials as such.

The incident in which he died is described here. Firefighter Wagner died on February 28, 1890, at the corner of SW 7th and Salmon Street in Portland, Oregon. He was fatally injured while testing a new steam powered fire engine. He was struck in the head by a nozzle and never regained consciousness. He was 37 years of age and assigned to Truck 2 at that time of his death. He was badge number 71. He is buried in the Firefighter's Section in grave South 105.

ERWIN WARREN NORTH 110

Died September 3, 2025

On September 3, 2025, Erwin Lewis Warren was called home at the age of 72, surrounded by the love of his family.

Born in Portland, Oregon on August 6, 1953, to Emmitt Earl Warren, Jr. and Elouis Warren, Erwin was the firstborn child and quickly grew into the role of protector, leader, and encourager. Shaped by strong family roots and the embrace of his community, he lived a life defined by service, loyalty, and love. As the oldest, Erwin set the standard for academic and professional success for his siblings. They attribute much of their success to the example he set for them, and the words of encouragement he provided.

He attended Portsmouth Elementary, Peninsula Elementary, and Adams High School. Erwin loved sports, especially football and softball. He carried that same team spirit into every part of his life. While at Adams High, he met the love of his life, Deborah Moore.

On November 3, 1973, Erwin married Deborah. Together, they raised two sons, Erwin Donta Warren, Jr. and Komar Jerado Warren.

Erwin began his career in 1976 at Station 23 for training and then onto Station 3 in NW Portland where he served for 16 years as a firefighter. He was then transferred to one of a myriad of stations all involving the training of our newest members as Erwin was skilled at recognizing how people learned and had an innate sense of how to motivate. He simply wanted everyone to be successful, and he poured his heart into the efforts of walking alongside each and every firefighter on their path of learning. Following his time as a trainer, he landed in a spot where he truly made his mark as the Recruiter for Portland Fire. He shepherded countless individuals into the career of firefighter for PF&R and to a person you will hear "I would not be here if it was not for that guy!"

As the recruiter, he established the first apprenticeship program run out of our training station. This apprenticeship program was instrumental in fostering cultural diversity within PF&R as it was his desire to have a group of responding firefighters that mirrored the community they served and much of the diversity we see today in the firehouses across the city can be tied to Erwin and his tireless efforts. He acted as the recruiter for the last 8 years of his first go with Portland Fire (retiring in 2006) and was then brought back multiple times by the Fire Chief to assist in the recruiting process as his impact was well known and ability to foster an applicant to the training academy was nearly unmatched.

Erwin's career experience at PF&R gave him numerous opportunities to share his voice at schools, colleges, career fairs, and community gatherings. His commitment to duty and standing watch made him a respected figure in the fire bureau and throughout all of Portland.

Erwin received numerous awards and honors, including recognition from the Black Firefighters Association, Word is Bond, Morning Star Baptist Church, and former Fire Chief Sara Boone. His passion for mentorship lives on in the Erwin Warren FRIEND Firefighter STEM Summer Camp, inspiring BIPOC youth to pursue careers in firefighting, EMT, and paramedic services.

Of all his roles, Erwin most cherished being a father and grandfather. Becoming "Papa" brought out his most joyful, playful, and generous spirit. He loved nothing more than spoiling his grandchildren and watching them grow.

Erwin was preceded in death by his parents, Emmitt and Elouis Warren, who now welcome him home.

He leaves to carry forward his legacy: his devoted wife, Deborah Warren; his sons, Erwin Donta Warren (E Tishell Callwood-Warren) and Komar Warren; his brothers, Dale Warren (Armelita Warren), Marlon Warren, Gregory Allen (Christina Allen), and Quinten Warren (Jemima Drummond); his sisters, Judy Brown (Garland Brown), Doreen Scott (Curtis Scott), Janet Warren, and Janell Ephraim (William Ephraim); his beloved grandchildren, Tahjamare Fogle (Diante Fogle), Khali Warren, Khavae Warren, and Khamiya Warren; along with a host of aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins, and dear friends who will forever hold his memory in their hearts.

ARCHIE A. WILLIAMS                              NORTH 140

Died 1873

The mention of William's most unhappy end in 1873 brings vividly to mind an incident which occurred only a few months before. Williams had served efficiently as Chief Engineer for one year and his name was presented for re-election. He was young and ambitious and had fully set his heart on being successful in his second candidacy. Among the members of Multnomah #2 he was a decided favorite and, as a matter of course, that company ardently supported him in the contest. Besides, he had many warm friends in the department. Against Williams was pitted William O. Bruen, an old member of Columbian Engine Company #3 and the idol of that company. The contest was very warm and close and during the day of the election, there was manifested more or less personal feeling, especially between the two opposing candidates, and generally among firemen.

After the polls closed, several hundred eager and excited firemen collected in front of the voting place on Morrison Street, between First and Second, to await the result of the canvass. So close was the contest that the fire boys had literally "counted noses," had canvassed matters down so fine that they knew just how many votes would be polled in the department and consequently, how many each candidate would require to secure the much-coveted position. Each ballot was called out in a loud, distinct voice so that all could hear. As the canvass proceeded the interest gradually deepened and as the end approached, became almost breathless. Every fireman had a pencil and slip of paper on which he was recording the tally, and everybody was keeping the tallied number in mind. Finally Bruen lacked only five, then four, then three. For every man almost held his breath and eagerly watched and waited, Bruen presently got another vote, and now needed only one more to elect him. Several ballots were called for Williams in succession and when the judge uttered the word "Bruen" again, he paused significantly a moment and held up the ballot. Shouts and cheers broke out from scores of throats and a moment later, a hundred or more firemen were to be seen dancing excitedly around, throwing their hats in the air and shaking hands with each other.

Bruen and Williams had stood all during the canvass side by side watching and counting every ballot in silence. Just as Bruen received the vote which made him Chief Engineer, he turned to his unsuccessful rival and, holding out his hand, said with a pleasant smile, "Archie, congratulate me, old fellow, I have fairly beaten you and am Chief Engineer. I'm sorry we couldn't both be elected." The gracious and manly spirit which prompted Bruen, and the half regretful tone in which the words were uttered, appealed with irresistible force to every chivalrous instinct in Williams' nature. Everything was forgotten in an instant, every feeling of personal bitterness, and hot rivalry had vanished from his heart. Grasping Bruen's hand and shaking it warmly, he said, while his eyes moistened and his lips trembled, "I congratulate you Billy, with all my heart, you have beaten me fairly and, as I can't be Chief Engineer, this time I am glad you have got it."

Williams had chosen a safe, speedy and painless method to end his earthly trouble, the instrument selected being a pistol. He had placed the muzzle in his mouth and then fired the fatal shot, the ball ranging up through his brain. Death was instantaneous, of course. From the position of the body when found, Williams must have been kneeling at the side of his bed at the moment he pulled the trigger. But for all that, the pangs of disappointment, ambition, and the humiliation of defeat rankled deeply in his breast, and hastened, if it did not lead directly, to his tragic fate, which occurred only a short time after.

He never lived to be a candidate again. The hands which were joined on that occasion have crumbled back to dust and the tongues which uttered these words of friendly greeting are stilled forever in death. Some years later (1880) Billy Bruen (grave N-88) died, and now lies in the

ABSALOM BARRETT HALLOCK

BLOCK 6 / LOT 86 / GRAVE 2 SOUTH

Died October 28, 1889

When Oregon City was a place of much more prominence than Portland, A. B. Hallock came to the northwest. He cast in his lot with the little village that stood on the west bank of the Willamette and soon proved his worth as a factor in the business interests of the town. He became actively connected with the growth of the city as a surveyor and builder and retained his residence here for a quarter of a century, while within one of Portland's beautiful cemeteries his earthly remains now rest.

Mr. Hallock was born in Utica, New York, in 1826, a son of Dr. A. B. Hallock, who was a representative of an old Quaker family. After attending the schools of Utica for several years the son entered business circles as an apprentice to the cabinet-maker's trade and became a fine mechanic and also an expert draftsman, civil engineer and surveyor.

The great unsettled west seemed to promise him opportunities along the line of his business, and in the year 1849 he made his way to the Pacific coast, over the water route and across the isthmus of Panama. He journeyed alone and when he reached Oregon proceeded at once to Oregon City, where he secured employment at his trade. Later he turned his attention to building and contracting and to him is due the distinction of having erected the first brick building on First street, Portland, its location being near Pine. Later he erected the Ladd & Tilton Bank building and a number of other early prominent business blocks of the city.

Moreover in matters of public interest he took an active and helpful part and his labors were of distinct value to the city in many ways. He was a member of the early volunteer fire department and his foster daughter, Mrs. Cotter, has a fine silver trumpet made of fifty hammered silver dollars which was presented to him by the Multnomah Engine Company, April 2, 1862, after he had efficiently acted as foreman of that company for five years. In addition to his other work in Portland he was one of the early surveyors of the city and laid out the Couch addition.

In 1874 Mr. Hallock removed to Tillamook, where he lived retired. He purchased forty acres of land there, owning the present site of Ocean Park, now one of the attractive summer resorts on the sea coast. He resided there up to the time of his death, which occurred October 28, 1889, his remains being then brought back to Portland, for interment in Lone Fir cemetery. He had been reared in the faith of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, but never joined any church. His life, however, was actuated by high moral principles and he was in sympathy with all movements for the betterment of mankind. He possessed a fine voice and sang in a number of churches. His political support was given to the democracy, but he would never hold office except when he was a member of the city council for a few years. However, he always took an active part in politics and in fact was ever interested in all that pertained to the welfare and upbuilding of the community, cooperating in various projects for the material, intellectual, political, social and moral advancement of this city.

In 1856 Mr. Hallock was married to Miss Mary T. Bliss, who was born in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1830, and when young went to Massachusetts to live. In 1855 she came to Portland where her sister, Mrs. Leland, was then residing. She died in 1863 and the two children of that marriage are both deceased. The son Edward reached the age of fifty years, passing away in 1907, while the daughter Bessie died in infancy.

They also had an adopted daughter, Annette B., who was born in Ashland County, Ohio, and in 1852 came to the west, settling in Portland. The trip over the plains had consumed all of the time between the 1st of June and November. Here she (Annette B) became the wife of John Cotter, who was born at Whitehall, New York, on the 17th of March, 1838. He came to the west when twenty-one years of age, making his way to the mines. He was a barber by trade, following that pursuit in Portland. It was in this city that they were married, March 31, 1868, and for twenty years they (Mr & Mrs Cotter) traveled life's journey happily together, but the death of Mr. Cotter occurred on the 7th of December 1888, his remains being interred in Lone Fir cemetery. He, too, was a member of the volunteer fire department, No. 1, and he belonged to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Cotter were born six children: Lillian, who is the wife of Mortimer Lawler, of Boston, Massachusetts, and has one son, Howard; Harry A., of Spokane, Washington; John F., of Seattle; Esther, the wife of Arthur B. Loder, of Chicago; Louise, at home; and one died in infancy. With the exception of a period of six months spent in Indianapolis, Mrs. Cotter has resided continuously in Portland since she came across the plains more than half a century ago, and has been an interested witness of its growth as it has been transformed from a small and enterprising town to the beautiful Rose City of the present day."

Hallock would serve on Multnomah Engine Company #2 beginning in 1858 and would serve a term as Chief Engineer for the Portland Volunteer Fire Department in 1875.

Lee Holden was born December 30, 1865 in Cairo, Illinois. In 1885, he moved to Portland, Oregon. He would marry Minna Margaret Lang on June 29, 1887. Less than two months later, on August 8, 1887, Lee would join the East Portland Fire Department. He would be assigned to Grant Engine Company #2, located on East 7th Avenue between Harrison and Stephens Streets (1917 SE 7th Avenue). He would make Captain on October 14, 1891.

It was about the time Lee made Captain that East Portland Fire Department merged with the Portland Paid Fire Department. He would serve as Captain of Hose 3 (1917 SE 7th Avenue) until he was "discharged" on July 31, 1896. There is no explanation in his personnel file as to what "discharged" meant. Lee would be reappointed as Battalion Chief on July 5, 1898, under Fire Chief David Campbell. Lee would "resign" on February 1, 1908, again without explanation. He would be reinstated three years later, on December 15, 1911, just a few months after the line of duty death of Chief Campbell. Lee would become Assistant Chief under Fire Chief John Young on April 23, 1923 and then become Fire Chief on June 30, 1923 when Young would leave office.

It was the period of time after Lee's 1911 reinstatement that earmarks his most notable contributions. Lee was called upon to design a new era of fire stations that would move Portland Fire from the horse drawn era into the motorized era, and beyond. While architectural firms would create the drawings, Lee's design work ensured that a generation of fire stations would meet the needs for Portland Fire's crews and equipment.

Lee Holden would complete his fire service career on December 31, 1927. His wife, Minna, had died in 1922 so Lee spent his new found time with the Masonic Lodge and the Shriners. He would move to Seaside, Oregon in 1939.

At age 77, Lee traveled from Seaside to Portland in June of 1943. His daughter had been involved in a vehicle collision between a city bus and a fire engine. He had stopped to visit old friends at Fire Station 7 at 1036 SE Stark Street when he suffered a stroke. He was transported to Good Samaritan Hospital where he would succumb to event.

Avenue). On May 9, 1913, Marion was transferred to Engine 22 (1233 SW 1st Avenue) and on March 31, 1915, Engine 1 (720 SW 4th Avenue).

On July 9, 1915, Marion was promoted to Captain. He would be assigned to Engine 32 (7214 N. Philadelphia Avenue - this building still exists) where he would remain for almost 20 years. On March 31, 1935, Marion would be promoted to Battalion Chief, in charge of District 3.

District 3 headquarters was at Station 8, located at 45 N. Russell Avenue. It would be the night of March 30, 1947, with Marion on duty at the station, where he responded with crews to several emergencies before turning in for the night in his private room in the station. The morning of March 31st, Marion failed to report to the morning roll call. Crew members went to check on him and found that he had died in the night of a heart attack. Marion was 63 years old.

Marion's personnel file notes that he worked 40 years, 4 months, and 18 days. This is a remarkable tenure that saw him rise quickly through the ranks and serve as a Captain or Battalion Chief for 32 of his working years. Because of his death on duty, Marion was given the distinction of being placed on Portland's Roll Call of Firefighters who gave their lives in service to the citizens of Portland.

ADAM AGUSTUS WATERFORD                      BLOCK 16 / LOT 48 / GRAVE 2 NORTH

Died March 26, 1909

Adam Augustus "Gus" Waterford was born in British Columbia in 1860, the son of Alexander Waterford, a self-freed slave from Tennessee, and Martha Griffin Waterford, a Kentucky woman.

In 1865 the family moved to Portland, where Gus grew up with several brothers and sisters. Alexander Waterford found work as a laborer and participated actively in Republican Party politics. Records have not come to light to substantiate the rumor that Alexander Waterford worked as a Deputy for the Multnomah County Sherriff or served as a Justice of the Peace in East Portland in the 1870s. He did some kind of work for the city of Portland in 1874, for which he was paid $26. He was a founding member of the Hayes and Wheeler Republican Club in 1876, along with Joseph Simon, W. Lair Hill and Henry Corbett, becoming one of the first black Republican Party activists and paving the way for his son's career in Joseph Simon's political machine.

Fire Department record from the 1800s are sparse. However, clear documentation of Gus Waterford's service as a Portland Firefighter was found in a September 18, 1890 Oregonian article describing the newly built Fire Station #6 and its roster of members.

- George Stewart - Engineer
- George Baldwin - Engine Driver
- H. White - Hose Wagon Driver
- William A. Hart - Fireman
- John Gotthart - Assistant Fireman
- H. Habekost - Extraman

- Gus Waterford - Extraman
- Fred Myer - Extraman
- M. Cavarán - Extraman
- B.F. King - Extraman

Gus would serve as an "Extraman." This was a position that was created in January 1883 when Portland Fire moved from an all volunteer fire department to a paid fire department. Paid is a bit of a misnomer since the majority of Portland Firefighters from 1883 to 1904 were volunteers, or what was termed "Extramen." As the roster shows, the steam engine and hose wagon were staffed by 5 paid firefighters and 5 extramen. A work schedule at that time required paid firefighters to work 7 days a week, with only 12 hours per week off. During that time, Extramen provided valuable service to keep staffing at adequate levels.

Gus' service as a Portland Firefighter may have been because of political warfare between two factions of the Republican Party led Joe Simon. They put pressure on the city of Portland to hire African Americans. In 1892 Moody Scott became the first black hired employee of the City and George Hardin became a Portland policeman in 1894.

Waterford didn't last long in the Fire Department, but he was a strong enough ally of U.S. Senator Joseph Simon that he became the first African American employee of the Portland Post Office, where he worked as a Porter and Supply Clerk. Gus' obituary stated that he served the Post Office for 14 years, until his death in 1909. That would mean he may have served the Portland Fire Department from 1890 to 1895.

Waterford was fired by Postmaster John Minto in 1908 in a scandalous case that was either an attempt to blackmail Minto or a graft operation in which Minto skimmed money from Waterford's wages. The truth of the matter depends on what you believe, but few powerful Portlanders at that time were willing to take the word of a black man against a white man. Waterford was probably in declining health when he left the Post Office, because he died of stomach cancer in less than a year.
